

Quino Checkerspot Butterfly

Immediately following the adoption of the MSCP in San Diego County in 1997, the Quino Checkerspot Butterfly was listed as federally endangered species. The MSCP does not provide coverage for this species and projects around San Diego County have had to deal with the species on individual basis when the butterflies are found on their property. The county has been working with the wildlife agencies to development an amendment to the MSCP to provide coverage for the Quino. The BIA is working with the county to ensure that the amendment is fair and consistent with the framework of the MSCP.
